Claim Objections

1. Claim 1 is objected to because of the following informalities: spelling of 'dose' rather than --does--. Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 8-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Gosior (6684062). Gosior discloses a wireless game control system teaching claimed features/steps as broadly claimed including a communication device or game machine which can wirelessly connect with a plurality of slave/controllers (fig 4, 5b, 6b-9) where each slave/controller includes an identification information as an address (8:17) that is stored by base/master unit (8:10-18, 28-34) to maintain a list of identified/bonded slave/controller so as to call/poll the associated/bonded slave/controller from the identified list.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Art Unit: 3714

5. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

6. Claims 1-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Gosior. Gosior discloses game machine and communication device wirelessly connected with a plurality of slaves/controllers that registers/stores identification information of the slave/controller (sic) and includes a register deletion instruction as operation of a bonding key (8:50-57). Also, while features of an apparatus may be recited either structurally or functionally, claims directed to an apparatus must be distinguished from the prior art in terms of structure rather than function. >In re Schreiber, 128 F.3d 1473, 1477-78, 44 USPQ2d 1429, 1431-32 (Fed. Cir. 1997) (The absence of a disclosure in a prior art reference relating to function did not defeat the Board's finding of anticipation of claimed apparatus because the limitations at issue were found to be inherent in the prior art reference); see also In re Swinehart, 439 F.2d 210, 212-13, 169 USPQ 226, 228-29 (CCPA 1971); In re Danly, 263 F.2d 844, 847, 120 USPQ 528, 531 (CCPA 1959). "[A]pparatus claims cover what a device is, not what a device does." Hewlett-Packard Co. v. Bausch & Lomb Inc., 909 F.2d 1464, 1469, 15 USPQ2d 1525, 1528 (Fed. Cir. 1990) (emphasis in original). Further, a claim containing a "recitation with respect to the manner in which a claimed apparatus is intended to be employed does not differentiate the claimed apparatus from a prior art apparatus” if the prior art apparatus teaches all the structural limitations of the claim. Ex parte Masham, 2 USPQ2d 1647 (Bd. Pat. App. & Inter. 1987) (The preamble of claim 1 recited that the apparatus was “for mixing flowing developer material” and the body of the claim recited “means for mixing ..., said mixing means being stationary and completely submerged in the developer material”. The claim was rejected over a reference which taught all the structural limitations of the claim for the intended use of mixing flowing developer. However, the mixer was only partially submerged in the developer material. The Board held that the amount of submersion is immaterial to the structure of the mixer and thus the claim was properly rejected.). In this case, Gosior discloses a communication device and a game machine teaching claimed structure for identifying from a stored list slaves/controller units with which to wirelessly connect such that an identified slave/controller may connect with one port to which it is bonded but not to another port to which it is not bonded for establishing connection rights to game system such that the structure is taught and the function fails to patentably distinguish. Alternatively, it was notoriously well known in gaming that historically game console/controller manufacturers initially precluded connection of devices not of their manufacture/design such that a manufacturer of a game console only permitted controller/slave units of their manufacture to connect to their console so as to limit consumers to use of their products to build brand/product loyalty/dependency; however, over time, manufacturers due in part to consumer pressure became more universally oriented in allowing cross manufacture connection. Thus, it would have been obvious to an artisan at a time prior to the invention to add ‘which does not satisfy a predetermined condition is registered’ and ‘does not establish a connection with slave having registered identification information' (as claimed) as notoriously well known to Gosior to build brand/product loyalty/dependency.

Art Unit: 3714
